

Indiana Native Has Made Tupelo Home

TUPELO, Miss. — Last May, Scott Williams decided to return to school. This time as an employee rather than a student.

In his first year as the Director of Human Resources, the Terre Haute, Indiana, native joined the TPSD family following a long and successful corporate career.

As a youngster, he decided to stay home to further his education at Indiana State, earning a bachelor of science degree in Safety Management after realizing he was too old to become a test pilot at 26.

While in college, he worked as an Emergency Medical Technician and an EMT Instructor.

Although he has family spread out from coast-to-coast, he and his wife, Donna, have been in Tupelo for 30 years. But if you give him an opportunity to vacation in the Rocky Mountains, he'd be the first out the door.

A man of simple taste, a food favorite is a three-egg omelet. But don't even think about asking him to eat anything spicy hot. It won't happen.

However, there's nothing simple about his dream vehicle. If Scott could keep anything in his garage, it would be a Cessna 182 airplane.

This week's TPSD administrative focus is Human Resources director, Scott Williams.
